My Cancer Treatment

brought to you by the National Peer Review Programme

This information is brought to you by the National Peer Review Programme, hosted by the NHS.

My Cancer Treatment provides up to date and accessible information about NHS cancer services in England, for most of the common cancers and some of the rarer cancers.

The reports available provide information to help you decide where to go for your cancer treatment including:

- How well the team compares to all the other teams in the country providing similar services
- Identification of any serious concerns or immediate risks, highlighting where they has been any compromise to quality of patient care, or risk to patient or staff safety
- If the cancer service has all relevant members of the team, including a clinical nurse specialist
- Percentage of patients seen by the hospital, that meet the cancer waiting times standards, set by the Department of Health
- Survey results about how other cancer patients rate their experiences of care in that hospital

My Cancer Treatment is proudly supported by Macmillan Cancer Support and we are working together to make My Cancer Treatment accessible, easy to use and helpful for people affected by cancer.
